Yemen King Dying

CAIRO (AP)—Imam Ahmed, 64-year-old king of Yemen, is critically ill. Source in close touch with Yemen's government said Friday he may die within the next few days.

The Imam has had rheumatism for several years and is reported suffering from heart disease.

He has been a strong-handed ruler. Persons familiar with his isolated Red Sea kingdom say his death might bring a political crisis.

Tramp or King Can Sit in Park

LONDON (Reuters) — A policeman's order to get up and judge here has upheld a man's get out of the park, right to sit on a park bench. Judge Geoffrey Raphael whether he's ragged as a tramp found that if regulations were fully enforced, "you will come to a position where police will permit only gentlemen with morning coats and grey topcoats" refused to obey a po-

Khrush Not Crushed

BERLIN (UP) — Soviet boss Nikita S. Khrushchev found himself waving to empty seats yesterday at a "mass rally" called in Leipzig Stadium to hear him pledge "devastating" retaliation against an attack on any satellite.

But residents of Leipzig were as apathetic about the visit of the Soviet leader as East Berliners were on his arrival two days ago.

Khrushchev denied he was getting a cool reception and told militia units the Western press probably would say they were "forced" to parade before him.

Two thirds of the seats in the vast 100,000-seat stadium were empty for the "mass rally." Khrushchev rode around the field in a car, waving his gray hat—even as he passed empty blocks of seats.

ALLABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Nearly five months have passed since I smoked a cigarette. From the lofty plateau of five months' abstinence, I can look down cautiously on the habit that held me sometimes.

But the thing is still on my trail. I have gained some ground. In those first weeks, I felt tobacco-hunger clawing at me all the time. Now it only gets near me sometimes, and it has lost strength.

There were three chief occasions when I wanted a cigarette most: when I was relaxed, when I was tense, and when there was a bad smell in the air.

In relaxation, I never feel the urge for a cigarette at all, nowadays. Tension still trips the emotional mechanism of desire for tobacco. In groups of people where I feel ill at ease, or alone with a stubborn, rebellious typewriter, I still wish I could soothe myself with a cigarette.

As far as I am concerned, there is no such thing as victory over tobacco. There is only continued, successful flight.

The habit doesn't press so closely as it did in those first heavy weeks of swearing, nail-biting and mental torture.

Only Gentle Wish

It is a gentle wish, nothing like the fierce sense of privation that attacked me in the first weeks.

Deadening the nose against smells, I believe, was one of the original reasons why people began smoking at all. Even in my pure state, I can remember the valuable properties of tobacco smoke as a naval anaesthetic. So when a sour or rotten odor comes at me, I wish I were still a smoker.

Almost as soon as I quit smoking, my sense of smell became sharper. Now it has become so acute as to cause me actual distress at times. The other Sunday morning I drove into town to find a thick sea-mist hanging over the city, charged to the point of nausea with the rotten smell of pulp mill, blown across the strait (I suppose) from Port Townsend.

When I pass a full garbage can six feet or so to starboard, it sends out such a strong signal that I lurch as though struck by a squall of wind.

Those sweet, musky perfumes like "Indiscret" and "Foolhardy," draw me, nose-first, like a magnet, and it takes a good slap on the nose to turn me aside.

I'm exaggerating, but laying off the weed has truly sharpened my sense of smell. It also has given me some wind, so that I can run across the street when I see a creditor, without feeling any discomfort, except stark fear.

Hats Put Lid on Trip

MOSCOW—Nina Ponomareva, the Soviet woman discus thrower, has withdrawn from an athletic team to meet Britain in London this month because of "the painful impression" of her last London visit, a Soviet official said Friday.

She was charged last year with abducting two hats from a London shop.

DOE LAKE, Ont.—Surrounded by 1,600 Girl Guides, State Secretary Ellen Fairclough opened the World Girl Guide camp at a giant campfire Friday night, marking the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lord Baden-Powell.

LOS ANGELES—Orchestra leader Charlie Barnett's 10th marriage has ended in annulment. His singer-actress bride, Joy Windsor, 26, testified that Barnett, 43, "wouldn't settle down," and had refused to live with her as husband since their marriage last May.

LONDON—Canada's Governor-General Massey flew to Milan yesterday for an eight-day visit in the Lake Garda district of Italy.

HOLLYWOOD—Pint-sized Mickey Rooney and his fourth wife, Elaine Mahonken Davis, plan a six-month trial separation. Rooney's previous wives were Ava Gardner, Betty Jane Rase and Martha Vickers.

SAN FRANCISCO—Ex-president Herbert Hoover, 83 today, says: "After you pass the scriptural limit of three score and 10 years, your longevity depends mainly on pills."

She was charged last year with abducting two hats from a London shop.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont.—Two U.S. athletes failed to swim 32 miles across Lake Ontario between Switzerland and Ontario.

Jim Woods, 41, of Orlando, Fla., and Ralph Wildard, 43, of Peekskill, N.Y.

were in the water eight hours.

VANCOUVER—Harold Yates, 42, charged with committing an indecent act told the magistrate that psychiatric examinations carried out at Oakalla prison farm are farcical. About all the doctor does is say, "Hello, how are you? I know that what I did was wrong. I would like to go to Essondale for treatment."

Giant Cave-in Isolates Town

This giant chasm, over 600 feet deep, split the only highway out of Timmins, Ont., leaving mining community of 50,000 virtually isolated. Cave-in was caused by collapse of underground mine pillars over an abandoned shaft.

Officials fear further cave-ins may block the city's only railroad line.

Father, Mother, Son Die Mysteriously

TORONTO (CP)—The bodies of Arnon Vernon Kirk, 63; his wife, Amelia, 60, and their 24-year-old son, Vernon, were discovered Friday night in various rooms of their Vaughan Road home in northwest Toronto.

Police had been sent to the house by neighbors who earlier in the week had been made uneasy by goings-on about the premises and later were aroused by odors from the house, and files.

Autopsies were begun immediately. Deputy Detective Chief John Nimmo said there appears no immediate way of knowing whether it was a triple slaying or a case of slaying and suicide. Neither was there any indication of how long the trio had been dead.

Mrs. Kirk's body was found on the bed of an upstairs front bedroom. Her husband's was on its back on the bed of a middle bedroom on the same floor. David's body, lying on its face, was on the floor of the same room.

KITIMAT, B.C. (CP)—A carpenters' strike here may end this weekend. Hundreds of workers returned to work Friday as the carpenters' union withdrew pickets from all jobs except six employing carpenters. Carpenters were expected to vote at a special meeting Friday night on the latest wage offer of the Builders' Exchange, representing the contractors.

The entrances had been filled in with dirt to hide the secret base when Soviet forces withdrew.

Police said a search of the house disclosed a weapon, called police when she became hammers, an axe and a poker anxious at not seeing the Kirks were examined and all proved about the house for several days.

Autopsies were begun immediately. Deputy Detective Chief John Nimmo said there appears no immediate way of knowing whether it was a triple slaying or a case of slaying and suicide. Neither was there any indication of how long the trio had been dead.

Mrs. Kirk's body was found on the bed of an upstairs front bedroom. Her husband's was on its back on the bed of a middle bedroom on the same floor. David's body, lying on its face, was on the floor of the same room.

Folly at the Fountain

CITY Council's decision to wreck the Esplanade Circle and spend tens of thousands of dollars substituting something else demands an explanation to the taxpayers. Not an explanation of the working details of the plan it has adopted against the wiser counsels of three of its members, but of the council's reason for doing anything at all.

What is this expensive project intended to cure? The mayor and aldermen have the word of their own engineer for it that traffic conditions at the Fountain do not warrant this heavy expenditure at present. Mr. Garnet is an expert in this field; he has had extensive experience of England's traffic problems to which the occasional congestion at the Fountain cannot even be compared, and he is as fully qualified to give advice as anyone else who has reported on the situation.

To suggest that for the present at least the council should file the Faustman report without action is in no way to reflect on the judgment of its author. Mr. Faustman was hired by the City to devise a plan of automatic controls. He did his job ably and well, and it is worth the fee paid to him for Victoria to have his plan on hand for use some time in the future, if conditions at the Fountain eventually reach the point where mechanical control becomes essential. The council doesn't need to feel that because it has paid a few thousand dollars for Mr. Faustman's report it must do what he suggests right away, when the most efficient and experienced engineer the City has had for many a day says the situation does not justify it yet.

On top of all this there is no assurance from anywhere that the $30,000 one-way plan of movement involving reorganization of a large area adjacent to the Circle would prove satisfactory. If it didn't the taxpayers would have to put up another $5,000 to convert it to a two-way plan. No one has said anything yet about what the situation would be if that didn't work either—but it is an element in the case which should be remembered.

What the members of the council favoring this foolishness should do is to suspend action, pick the busiest day they can think of, pack themselves some lunches and go camp on the lawn of the Fountain for 12 hours. They should keep their eyes glued on the traffic and assess for themselves the degree and duration of congestion and the effectiveness of rush-hour direction given by the very able policemen on duty. If after that they are still convinced that it is imperative to spend $30,000 forthwith on what would be no more than an experiment the taxpayers might be more willing to accept their judgment. From our own close observation of the Circle in operation at all hours right through the year we are satisfied that the aldermen would come away from their little picnic in a different frame of mind. If not, we would gladly pay for the lunches.

Out of the Frying Pan

IRONY is a plague of human endeavor and it is entering into the hydrogen bomb question. Great Britain for example is reported to have perfected a "clean" H-bomb, or at least an explosion with much less radioactive fall-out than the tests conducted by the United States or Russia. Conclusions on this are not yet definite and may not be for a considerable time, but undoubtedly the development of a so-called clean bomb would ease some of the fears of the world. It would confine the damage to what should be the focus of military attack, namely a military target.

The call for an end to nuclear bomb testing, and to H-bombs themselves, is spurred by the menace to countless individuals involved by radioactive fall-out. Millions of innocent people across the globe may be the long-run sufferers of these tests according to the worst fears, although not to all of the best authorities. On the face of it therefore a "clean" bomb would be a comparative relief, yet ironically this could make the world situation worse. If the point is reached where nuclear explosion leaves no tell-tale signs behind humanity could be kept in ignorance of even bigger build-ups of atomic weapons than ever before. It would make the present problem of disarmament vastly more difficult of solution.

The months that have been spent fruitlessly this year in trying to reach agreement on a lessening of the atomic arms race indicate the slender hope of a cure for the world's military ills, short of the H-bombs remaining as the chief deterring factor in keeping the peace. At least it can be said that while embryo belligerents know what each other is up to they are held in mutual paralysis of fear. Remove that, as "clean" tests are apt to do for all their temporary promise, and there is no telling what might result. Humanity has a propensity for popping itself out of the frying pan into the fire.

Prospects and a Backlog

IN spite of some changed factors which did not apply last year, it is difficult to hold a bleak view of British Columbia's prospects in the balance of the current year or in the immediate future. If all else fails, there is a backlog of indicated development long past the planning stage to add to the normal and growing requirements of a province which is still taking on new settlers at a fairly brisk pace. Lumber, newsprint, metals and other exports, both primary and manufactured, may for a time have more difficult markets to contend with abroad but they are not unsaleable, far from it. In any state of economic weather, British Columbia has basic products to sell which the world needs.

At the present time, British Columbia is about midway in a progression of industrial and other extensions which have provided fresh stimulus to the economic prospects of the region. Railway construction, highway building, industrial plant extension, pipelines, renewal of school plant, and also the thousand and one needs that attend the inflow of new settlement may certainly be conditioned by the times, but there is little prospect of this province running out of either opportunities or its own work. It is more likely that the impetus generated by the brisk strides of the last few years will carry forward a degree of progress that will offset changes in the export marketing picture.

More so today than in other times, British Columbia has a widely diversified field of opportunity coupled with a resilience in its commercial life which should stand it in good stead whatever is to come. There are few provinces in Canada which on a per capita basis have more practical grounds upon which to base a sturdy and realistic confidence in its own future. There in perspective is a balanced view, and little has occurred to shade it.

Interpreting the News

French Left-Wing Schisms

By BERNARD KAPLAN
North American Newspaper Alliance

PARIS — France's Socialists, in size and discipline the only French political group which comes even close to matching strength with the Communists, are threatened by disruption as a result of the deepening Algerian crisis.

The splitting up of the Socialist Party, which holds 101 seats in the National Assembly, would be the hardest blow at democracy's chances of surviving in France.

Disgusted by the worsening drift of affairs in Algeria and by a new measure authorizing the government to intern Algerians in metropolitan France, some 20 Socialist deputies have declared their intention of no longer following their party chieftain, ex-premier Guy Mollet, who fervently supports the present policy in North Africa.

Observers believe that the lid is now off as a result of these defections. It is predicted that possibly as many as half of the Socialist members of the assembly may shortly join the "rebels." Only Mollet's iron grip on the Socialist Party's machinery—he is its secretary-general—prevented the dispute from bursting to the top before this.

The anti-Mollet Socialists, including several well-known figures like former party head Daniel Mayer, have been stirred to anger not only by his role, but possibly even more by that of another fellow Socialist, Robert Lacoste. Mollet appointed Lacoste to the key post of resident minister in Algeria and he has been continued in it by the new non-Socialist premier, Bourges-Maunoury. As a Socialist, it had been expected he would work toward a political settlement radically extending the rights of Algerian Moslems. Instead, he quickly became the foremost spokesman of those advocating a "tough touch" policy.

Among "liberal" elements, it is probably not going too far to say that Lacoste is currently the best-hated man in France. But this stocky, diamond-hard politician is one of the idols of the right wing. Many Socialists are galled that he remains in their party and, even more, that he possesses the confidence and backing of their party's official leadership.

They also are highly critical of Mollet and his coterie because they believe that his policies while in office led to a diminution of civil liberties at home. They charge that this disturbing trend is continuing and getting worse. As evidence they point to the efforts allegedly to muzzle newspapers critical of the government's Algerian policy and the official intimidation of individual newspapermen, including several who have been detained.

All this is gratifying to the French Communists. Only six months ago, following the Hungarian revolution, the Socialists appeared on the verge of winning over thousands of disillusioned Communist adherents and possibly even destroying the Communists' mass party organization.

"Some view, eh?"

Early Papers

By FRANK KELLEY

ACCORDING to my information, some 15 publications appeared at different times locally between the Courier's debut in 1852 and the year 1865. The agitation for confederation added two ambitious bids for public favor by 1869, when John Robson (premier of British Columbia 20 years later) severed his connection with The Columbian, New Westminster, and joined the Colonist. In 1870 the Standard, published by Amor de Cosmos, appeared, causing some rivalry, which the Colonist survived. Then there was the Times (not the paper we know), edited by Harry Tooby, an Englishman; the Telegraph, and Evening Post, edited by William McDowell.

Bright in its way, the Post waned when a man named Gardiner arrived from California in 1884 and founded the Times, Victoria's evening paper, its first editor being J. C. McLagan, who later was to establish the Vancouver World. First real home of the Times was on Yates Street, between Campbell's Corner and the Bank of British North America. The Times production centre was on the second floor of a two-story brick building, as I recall seeing it on a September morning in 1889 while exploring the town. There was nothing to indicate a paper had its home there, although after passing a number of Victorians scanning the bulletin board, with its display of newspapers, notices of pending local events and jobs available at the "Corner," the appearance of a large man, topped with a good head of hair, with rolled up shirt sleeves revealing black ink spots on the bare arms, suggesting he had something to do with a print shop.

He was talking earnestly to another party, evidently a client interested in advertising space who had accompanied him down the narrow stairway to street level. The earnestness displayed attracted my attention, until the big man, having apparently convinced the listener of what he was saying, turned and sought his job with type and ink.

He was, I got to know later on, Bill Templeman, whose story is, or should be, familiar hereabouts. When he passed on the paper was published by his executors until Griffith Hughes and eventually the present owners, Victoria Press, became proprietors.

M. COLDWELL, a political leader highly respected for his integrity and other fine qualities, has lately been casting his CCF party in the role of a vigilant and iron-willed taskmaster.

The CCF, he has said, will try to force the Conservative government to carry out its election promises.

Coldwell's words seem to nominate the Tory government for a rope necklace before it has been convicted of anything. The CCF leader infers that because the administration is Conservative in political complexion, it follows that it will try to weasel out of its election promises.

"Left to its own devices," he said, "the new Conservative government would be as quick to consign its election promises to the wastepaper basket as was the Liberal government . . . The fact that the CCF holds the balance of power means that the Conservatives cannot lightly escape from their election promises."

Coldwell—who, incidentally, started his political life as a British Tory—has long been a staunch defender of human rights, rights of the citizen, parliamentary rights and British justice. Many times he has voiced his abhorrence of smears based on nothing but association—the "guilt by association" methods of some American congressional committees.

It is not coming rather close to this kind of logic to assume that the leaders of political parties other than your own are automatically guilty of chicanery and deceit, or at least attempt thereof?

Few would expect Coldwell to be an unbiased observer of the political scene. And what his bias seems to

The Chronicle was founded by D. W. Higgins and J. E. McMillan in 1862, was ably edited and carried on until 1866, when it was merged with the Colonist. With the merger D. W. Higgins took over control, continuing until 1866, the year it was sold to Ellis and Sargison. About the time Colonist and Chronicle merged, the Morning News started. The Globe was presented as an evening paper for a short time during the 1890s, and in 1894 when Hewitt Bostock made an investment in a printing press, it was installed at Tom Cusack's establishment in the old St. Andrew's Church building, corner of Courtney and Gordon Streets, where a weekly edited by Arthur Scalfé, the Weekly Province, found favor until 1896, when it was purchased by W. C. Nichol, who transferred it to Vancouver and started the Daily Province.

At times attempts were made to establish little weekly and monthly periodicals pertinent to mining and recreation. The B.C. Home Journal was issued by Dave Carley from the corner of Broad and Johnson. The Week was edited by W. Blakemore and enjoyed good patronage for some time; while Western Recreation and The Lance were offerings of C.H. Gibbs and Wild Life of the Woods and Waters, edited by Harry Pulien, had their readers.

Why did the cape go out of fashion? For centuries it was the favorite outer garment of man and woman. Certainly when the motor car came into universal use the cape should have come back. It is the perfect garment for driving. In the short old street in which I live many New Canadians have found accommodation, and one of them is an Austrian who has lately stolen the show. As you know, we native Canadians have recently taken to wearing shorts.

The Austrian came forth the other fine evening in his native leather shorts, with the beautiful embroidered braces, and his fine green shirt.

He made us all look cheap. As if that were not enough, an evening or two ago when it was lightly raining he appeared in his cape, a beautiful Loden cloth garment of spacious size, soft light wool of a lovely forest green color. It has a hood. And as he swung along the street even we of Scottish descent, who are a little inclined to view extravagances other than the kilt with some disdain, were moved to admiration.

In a score of ways, the conventions that have ruled men's garments are collapsing right and left. If they can go modern, they can also go fashionably dressed. Especially if the old fashion is more sensible.

Both my grandfathers in the 1890s wore Invernesses. An Inverness is an overcoat without any sleeves. A cape, finger-tip length, of the same tweed as the coat, is fastened under the military-type collar and buttons close in front, protecting the arms and chest far better than an overcoat.

Yet in the car today, as in the buggies and horse-drawn vehicles my grandfathers used, the Inverness cape can be flung open or even aside in the warm comfort of the car.

Both my grandfathers in the 1890s wore Invernesses. An Inverness is an overcoat without any sleeves. A cape, finger-tip length, of the same tweed as the coat, is fastened under the military-type collar and buttons close in front, protecting the arms and chest far better than an overcoat.

Do you know something? My old overcoat is just about worn out. I think I will order a new one this fall. And if that Austrian can get away with those leather shorts and that Loden cape, by golly I can get away with an Inverness. After all, it originated in Scotland.

In a score of ways, the conventions that have ruled men's garments are collapsing right and left. If they can go modern, they can also go fashionably dressed. Especially if the old fashion is more sensible.

Ring out a slowly dying cause
And ancient forms of party strife;

Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws;

Ring out false pride in place and blood;

The civic slander and the spite;

Ring in the love of truth and right,

Ring out old shapes of foul disease,

Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;

Ring out the thousand wars of old,

Ring in the thousand years of peace;

Ring in the valiant man and free,

The larger heart, the kindlier hand;

Ring out the darkness of the land,

Ring in the Christ that is to be.

Canadian Notebook

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

JUST at the moment I am looking for the fellow who told me that I must take care to do the night trip from Vancouver to Victoria and make certain of getting up early in the morning to see the beauties of Victoria harbor in the morning sun. It was a rough joke to play on an innocent abroad.

What, perhaps, was funnier was the listened to a loudspeaker eulogy of Victoria's gardens and telling passengers to look out for them at the moment we were passing the oil installations and the general untidiness of the harbor front.

Having now travelled by night and by day, I record that it is a tourist travesty to recommend a night trip. The run through the islands—and I did it on a dull, rainy day—not unlike the sort of thing that mad dogs of Englishmen pay for heavily in the Norwegian fjords, plus the midnight sun!

There were occasions when I found myself wondering a little apprehensively what would happen if the steering jammed or if the Queen Mary came unexpectedly around one of the sharp bends, but it did not prevent a glorious elation on a dull day and a firm resolve to do the same trip in sunshine. I had immense sympathy for the girl in the coffee shop aboard—doing a summer job—who told me that she was always being reprimanded for watching the view instead of serving coffee. She said she could not help it on a sunny day, and never got tired of it. I gathered the customers did. They wanted to eat.

The trip also gave me my first experience of tickling a seagull's tummy whilst it was on the wing. And who discovered that seagulls will take biscuits in flight as neatly as a marathon runner will take the staff in a relay race? Kids of all ages were having fun this way, including myself. There were old hands amongst the seagulls who took it every time. Some were rather nervous learners. They would make a good approach and then veer off in flight. Others looked on.

The tickle came when a rather greedy fellow with profound faith in the welfare state came back for more after the biscuits had run out. I am not sure who was more surprised. He nearly dropped into the sea in disgust.

What is the speed of a seagull? It can obviously maintain an easy 22 knots without getting puffed.

One of the interesting sidelights of tourism is the number of prematurely-aged American tycoons who are so obviously dominated by their wives. These noble men have spent a lifetime trying to keep up with wifey's expenditure and obviously wondering whether it is all worth while. One confided in me that he had been travelling for seven years because his wife liked travel. He was just getting confidential when his wife called "Jasper, come and get a coffee."

"But I don't want coffee," he said quietly to me, and proceeded to get up with an apology and follow the dragon down below.

Indeed the travellers seemed to provide an illustration of national characteristics. An English couple well into their seventies with hubby as attentive as if he was on a honeymoon—and his wife hardly less attentive. Several American tycoons completely dominated by managing wives. The Canadian couples seem to have found a happy compromise with both partners infected by the "do-it-yourself" attitude. When the Canadian wife wanted a coffee she invited her husband Hubby was not afraid to indicate dissent and wifey did not hesitate to go and have her coffee.

In similar circumstances I have no doubt that the English wife would have made a martyr of herself and gone without her coffee. A little later, no doubt, hubby would have sacrificed himself and insisted that she had a coffee.

Surprising what conclusions can be drawn, albeit erroneously, when crossing the Strait of Georgia on an otherwise dull afternoon.

Letters to the Editor

Beholden to Whom?

With reference to an article in your paper of Aug. 7 headed "Driving Crackdown Will Grow Tougher," I would like to take issue with the following: "It is our contention that driving is a privilege."

I have noticed on several occasions recently the expression "It is a privilege to hold a driving licence." Surely every healthy Canadian citizen who is not incapacitated and who has passed his test has a right to hold a driving licence and should he abuse that right by careless or reckless driving he deserves to be taken from the road.

If I am wrong and it is a privilege to drive a car, to whom are we beholden for this privilege? Perhaps Mr. Lindsay considers that he is the police official who grants this privilege. This kind of thinking leads to a "police state," a condition which I am sure all free Canadians wish to avoid.

Of course I have no criticism of Mr. Lindsay's "get tough" program as I think it is entirely necessary.

WARREN HASTINGS.
Ganges, Salt Spring Island, B.C.

(Editor's note: The principle that driving is a privilege, not a right, has been established by the high courts. Mr. Lindsay's jurisdiction over licences is in accordance with statutory authority and direction.)

Too Squeamish

It is certainly odd that a section of the British public should resent so vociferously a mild criticism of Queen Elizabeth's public-speaking style. In other circumstances the British man-in-the-street is only too ready to heap harsh and frequently undeserved insults upon his own elected leaders and, in point of fact, the monarchy has always been the butt of much unpublisht contumely.

A glance through a history book will indicate that this has always been the case.

It is true that British royalty is the least democratic of any surviving monarchy, but, in her capacity as the highest paid and ranking civil servant in the Commonwealth, it is inevitable that a good deal of criticism should be directed towards the Queen. It is certainly expected, and frequently acted upon.

Filter tips do not concern "Moni," a cigarette-smoking elephant in Frankfurt, Germany, as she puts her favorite brand through a jumbo-size holder. The hefty night club star can also play a mouth organ, add, subtract, and beat a kettle drum with her tail.

Bennett Plans Inspection

Premier Bennett will journey up to Prince George and beyond on an inspection trip of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway later this month.

Rail traffic was down across the nation, he said yesterday, and it was "amazing" how Mr. Finlayson had kept up its traffic.

"If the lumber business was buoyant, revenue would be up higher," he said.

George (Hees) is one of Deane's closest personal friends and George wanted it publicly Progressive Conservatives in Victoria and throughout B.C. flocked to the support of provincial leader Deane Finlayson yesterday and predicted he would be the next premier of B.C.

Almost to a man they refused suggestions made in The Daily Colonist yesterday that there was a move afoot to replace Mr. Finlayson as provincial leader and also gave their side of the story as to why the Nanaimo man had met Transport Minister George Hees at Patricia Bay airport Sunday.

The story, which appeared in a political column by this reporter, stated the opinions of some Conservatives that Mr. Finlayson would be replaced and that he had attempted to get the Conservative nomination to contest Burnaby riding in one of the three by-elections to be held Sept. 9.

ALSO STATED

It was also stated that Mr. Finlayson had met Mr. Hees at the airport and thereby made the latter's visit one of political significance, which it was never intended to be.

Local officials said yesterday, however, that the provincial leader was at the airport at Mr. Hees' request and that Mr. Finlayson was asked by the minister to pose with him for photographs.

"George (Hees) is one of Deane's closest personal friends and George wanted it publicly known that he supported Deane," said a party spokesman.

Mr. Hees, speaking from Vancouver, had this to say:

"I have the greatest respect for Mr. Finlayson and consider him a personal friend. I do not hesitate to say that the same regard for Mr. Finlayson is held by Mr. Diefenbaker and all of us at Ottawa."

In the column it was explained that Mr. Finlayson had asked to run as the party's candidate in Burnaby. Commenting on this from Kelowna, B.C. Conservative Association president H. S. Harrison Smith stated:

"As I understand it I want to say that the matter of Mr. Finlayson's candidacy was fully discussed at both the officers' and the executive's meetings here in Kelowna last weekend."

PERSONAL DESIRE
"Our leader expressed the personal desire to fight in one riding as a candidate. Our officers and executive asked him to retrain and to show general leadership in all three seats throughout the whole of B.C. as part of our buildup for the next general election," he continued.

"The officers, the executive and as far as I know every member of the B.C. Conservative Association has complete confidence in Mr. Finlayson and his leadership and we expect to see him premier of this province after the next provincial election," Mr. Smith said.

Also commenting on the story was Del Black, Conservative candidate in the Burnaby by-election. He said:

100 PER CENT

"Burnaby Conservatives are 100 per cent behind Deane Finlayson and our people were very disappointed when Mr.

Finlayson declined our request to be our candidate. My decision to contest the election came after the Conservative executive at Kelowna asked Mr. Finlayson to concentrate on a party buildup for the next provincial election rather than stand as a candidate now."

Han Mr. Finlayson accepted the nomination in Burnaby," said Mr. Black, "I would have supported him and so would all of my supporters."

That is the other side of the story.

Burnaby Conservatives are 100 per cent behind Deane Finlayson and our people were very disappointed when Mr.

Finlayson declined our request to be our candidate. My decision to contest the election came after the Conservative executive at Kelowna asked Mr. Finlayson to concentrate on a party buildup for the next provincial election rather than stand as a candidate now."

Han Mr. Finlayson accepted the nomination in Burnaby," said Mr. Black, "I would have supported him and so would all of my supporters."

That is the other side of the story.

Movement Spreading

'Prayer Cells' Restore Faith

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A clergymen are impressed little-publicized "prayer cell" with the movement. It is growing rapidly and is largely spontaneous. Some tangential in the sense that most ministers consider it the most significant development of the current religious revival.

Prayer cells are small groups of Christian laymen who take their religion seriously. They meet, usually in a member's home, pray together, read the Bible and talk over problems which beset man in the effort times attributed to church to "draw near to God with membership."

Joining a prayer cell is not a good way to make social or business contacts, or "set an example for the children." Even in this day of public piety, it is not a particularly good thing to do. People who would congratulate you warmly for becoming an usher or deacon at church are likely to lift an eyebrow at the idea of meeting in somebody's living room to pray.

The obvious conclusion is that small, informal prayer groups meet a spiritual need widely felt among today's Christian laymen.

Episcopal Bishop Austin P. Due of Pittsburgh, who has seen more than 100 prayer cells spring up in his city in the past few years, believes they attract people who "are seeking a faith that is more intimate and personal than can be found in formal Sunday services."

"We have all gotten so caught up in the successful running of the church that it is common for many to think that business activities are identical with religion," said the Rev. John Heuss, rector of Trinity Church, New York. "To pay mortgages, to build new parish houses, to put on a drive for new members, to hold bazaars, luncheons, dinners and bake sales—all this is admirable, but it is not religion."

'Religious Freedom Stifled by Catholics'

LONDON (AP)—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, said yesterday that "in some Roman Catholic countries there is no religious freedom."

The head of the Anglican Church, returning from the meeting of the World Council of Churches at New Haven, Conn., said:

"We thought the sensible thing was to ask the executive to begin to collect documentary information with a view to opening negotiations with the Church of Rome. We do not think the Church of Rome will regard this as an offensive action."

White Minister:

'Negroes Warmly Spiritual'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—A minister from Lachute, Quebec, says he found real warmth in a Negro congregation here.

"They put their life and heart into their religion," said Rev. Wilson Bridge, after preaching his first sermon in a 30-day exchange of pulpits with the pastor of a Negro Methodist church here.

Before he began his sermon at Little Rock A.M.E. Zion Church, Bridge told the congregation:

GO TO IT
"I am told you enjoy your religion. If you want to give vent to your feelings, you go to it."

And as he preached, the congregation came in on several occasions with a deep-throated "amen" and "yes, brother."

The minister, who came to Canada from England in 1951, said the idea for the unusual pulpit exchange came when he read that the Hood Theological African Methodist Evangelical Zion Seminary in Salisbury was open to Christian men and women of all races.

BOUNDED MARVELOUS
"I thought that sounded marvelous," he said. He wrote Rev. A. A. Perry of Winston-Salem, an Am. official, to ask about an exchange.

"When I asked officials of my church (the United Church of Canada) if it would be all right, they told me, 'God is the same Father to all. Go ahead, man!'"

The Canadian minister, here with his wife and 14-year-old son, has exchanged pulpits with Rev. E. R. Michael.

'Confidential' Policy:

'Make Readers Whistle'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Readers whistled and say "we never gave the trial promise of zest former editor of Confidential knew before." Ex-editor Howard Rushmore, publisher, Robert Harrison, had first approached him with his specialty, after he broke with Communism, was anti-Communist stories.

Magazine testified yesterday that its publisher wanted stories for Confidential and then its full-time editor in 1954.

Rushmore testified Friday that actress Francesca de Schafta offered to supply the scandal magazine with stories "even if I have to have an affair with the man involved."

ANTICS OF STARS

"He (Harrison) said he wanted to expose injustices and expose products harmful to the public and to print the antics of well-known people that Hollywood columnists refuse to print," Rushmore said.

Rushmore, who is also an admitted ex-Communist and sometime Daily Worker employee, said he was an investigator.

He told a conspiracy trial jury that Miss de Schafta, former wife of actor Bruce Cabot, supplied much information for Confidential's stories and came to New York several times to confer with publisher Robert Harrison.

"She told us she had access to practically every home in Hollywood, and an almost unlimited circle of friends, that she knew all the secrets and could get the stories we wanted," Rushmore said.

This was the first lively testimony at the trial of Confidential, its sister publication, Whispere, and various individuals on charges they conspired to commit criminal libel.

New sensations appear likely because of Superior Judge Herbert V. Walker's denying a motion by a lawyer for actor Tab Hunter to be excused from testifying.

This apparently means that more than 100 subpoenaed witnesses may be called, including many stars who have been featured in Confidential and Whispere stories.

Red Subs Dawdle Off U.K.

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Navy shadowed two Polish submarines moving down Britain's east coast Friday, but there was no clue as to what they were doing or where they were heading.

A naval spokesman said there was no confirmation earlier rumors that the crews might be preparing to seek asylum here.

The submarines flew the ensign of Communist Poland, but the admiral said it believed they are Russian-built craft of the later "M" class, designed for coastal work.

At one point the British ships sent them a courtesy message asking if they needed assistance. The submarines replied "no" but gave no hint of their destination.

Garden Notes

Cure for Droop

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Bud-Dropping Begonias — (G.B., Ladysmith). When tuberous begonias are grown indoors they will often develop the habit of dropping their buds before the flowers open for any one of a number of causes—too much or too little water, a small gas leak in the house, a draughty location, or a lack of atmospheric moisture.

With outdoor begonias the most common causes of bud dropping are dryness at the roots, and a shortage of potash in the soil.

Make sure your begonias are getting enough water, and scratch some wood ashes from the fireplace or garden bonfire into the soil around each plant. Each plant will take about 1½ cupsful of fine, friable ash, measured as you would with sifted flour—not compressed in the cup.

Gooseberry Pruning — (F.R.J., Victoria). I'm afraid you can't prune your gooseberries as you do your raspberries, as their habit of growth is entirely different. As you know, a raspberry cane is a biennial, and should be cut right out as soon as the fruit has been gathered to make room for the new canes which will bear next year's crop.

Gooseberries are pruned any time during the fall or winter after the leaves have fallen. First, remove any dead or broken shoots. Next, take out any low branches which would touch the ground when laden with fruit. Then take out any shoots which are more than four years old, as these are now in their productive career, and finally, cut off any inward-growing twigs or branches to open up the centre of the bush to the light and air.

Sick Montbretias — (M.S.M., Victoria). From your excellent description of the symptoms, I think your montbretias are suffering from an infection known as the "Yellows." This is a fungus disease, the spores of which settle on the leaves and work their way inside, rather like potato blight. Once in the bloodstream of the plant, the disease dissolves the green coloring matter in the leaves, and the plant takes on a sickly, pale, anaemic appearance.

Fortunately, this disease is much easier to control than potato blight. Use permanganate of potash, which is a remarkably versatile chemical to keep on the gardener's remedy shelf. Mix half a teaspoonful of the little brown crystals in two gallons of water, making a rich purple solution. Spray the plants with this, then water the roots with the same solution, giving each average-sized clump four pints. Recovery will be speedy and complete.

(B.J.M.Q., Sidney). I think that any garden chemical works a lot better when it is applied in solution rather than dry, but the ordinary grades of superphosphate sold locally are extremely difficult to dissolve in water.

One way of accomplishing this—I got the idea from my wife—is to put a little superphosphate in a kitchen bowl, add a little warm water, and "cream" it with the back of a spoon. The resultant paste is poured into the water and applied with a watering can.

Even after the creaming, there is a certain amount of sediment, and it is necessary to stop and stir the mixture occasionally to keep it in suspension.

Fortunately, this disease is much

Love You—Leave You

LUCERNE, LONDON, PARIS, ROME (NANA) — You never know about London. You can be a hit this year and a flop the next. They loved Frankie Laine when he was here before. This trip I'm not... I wonder how Mike Todd will fare when and if he returns?

British actress Google Withers is joining Laurence Harvey and Julie Harris on Broadway this coming season, in "The Country Wife."

"Falso" Farouk is still doing the night-club circuit in Rome. He's just as fat as ever. I'm surprised the heat doesn't melt him.

Here's the latest on the Vivien Leigh health chart. When a positive lady columnist—not this one—accosted her at a party and inquired solicitously, "Have you been ill?" Lady Vivien snapped, "Yes—after I read your column." When you feel that snappish, it's time for a vacation.

Rex Harrison and wife Kay Kendall write chums in London that they would be more interested in the movie version of Terence Rattigan's "French Without Tears." If it is musicalized. Presto, there will be music, and Rex will speak the lyrics a la "My Fair Lady," which I believe I told you is already sold out for the London premiere in April.

Incidentally, when Julie Andrews appears with the hit in England, her role in New York will be taken over by Sally Ann Howes, the daughter of a top British comedian, Bobby Howes. Bobby was the star of the very first show I was in.

Winning Contract

By Howard Schenken and Richard L. Frey

official, though in this instance it happened to show his best suit; conventionally, it meant only that he held no-four card major. Three no-trump would have been easier to make, especially when played from North's side of the table. East's double—perhaps coaxed by the knowledge that the opening no-trump bid was weak—actually helped South make his contract for a top score.

East made the queen and ace of diamonds and led a third round. Declarer ruffed with the ace. The double had marked the ace of spades as behind the king, so declarer had only the long-shot chance that the club finesse would succeed, plus the hope that he could find two re-entries to dummy in the trump suit.

The hope was nurtured when the eight of hearts dropped from East's hand under South's king. South led the heart jack, overtook with dummy's queen and got half of the good break he had played for when East dropped the nine. The other half came when he called for a low club and finessed the jack to win the trick. The ace of clubs was cashed, and declarer's carefully saved four of hearts put dummy in with the seven-spot. Three of declarer's spades went on the two high diamonds and the king of clubs.

Except for the double, South would surely have played the uncomplicated chance of finding West with the ace of spades and leading up to the king. The double bluffed that hope and forced South to discover the winning play.

The engagement is announced of Miss Pauline Shewchuk, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Shewchuk, Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, to John Edward Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Callahan, 2574 Epworth Street. The wedding will take place in Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Sept. 7, at 11 a.m., with Rev. Father M. J. McNamara officiating. Miss Shewchuk has chosen as her attendants Miss Doreen Vogel, maid of honor; Miss Muriel Marchbank, bridesmaid, and Miss Charlene Bourke, flower girl. Best man will be Mr. Edwin Bourke, with Mr. Tom Heppell ushering.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Boychuk, 242 Wark Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gody, Matin, to Mr. Robert St. George Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Geoffrey Ellis, 2192 Cranmore Road. The wedding is to take place Saturday, Sept. 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Cadboro Bay. —[Photo by Chevrons Studio.]

'Just a Wee Gift' For the Very Rich

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—This year, just a few million dollars with the right accessories can buy New York's finer stores what it takes to go with something for the top of the market. The new mother and baby who have made of parchment and paper everything it's worth and more, is one of the most important customers. And I can't help but think of Mrs. Bixby, of Winterton's $3,000 for Mrs. Bixby. It was the first time she had been to the store without buying a whole lot of things on the rack or trap which took two weeks.

The car has 20,000 miles on it, and the leather belt, Mrs. Bixby's signature color, is a pale pink. She and the only brother in the family, a boy three years old, were the first to get into the car.

The boy, of course, was there to keep the roughness off the leather.

At 10 o'clock, Mrs. Bixby was in the store again, this time with a friend, Mrs. Farnsworth, who had come to see the new baby.

She had a set of pearls and a sash with a brooch, and a pair of sash sash pins.

"I am not at liberty to say like a tie tack. Both the pill box and pins are the brainchild of Lucien Picard, a prize-winning jewelry designer. Another concern will display silver holloware which it bills as non-tarnishable."

Hopkins takes note.

A LOVELIER YOU

By Mary Sue Miller

Don't pull a long face. If aging is over a long angular face, stop. It can be turned into the line of classic beauty with the smallest bit of effort. Here's how:

Apply liquid to accentuate blemishes. Use a small, wide bony structure placed edge well out on cheeks and forehead, holding shape eyebrows with pencil, and blemishes, and a full mouth... Wear hair in soft waves, and make the forehead ruffled, not ears and not longer than the eye brow.

And remember, a pleased expression is the expression of a lover, offering features unequalled in grace and glow.

MAKE UP MAKE BELIEVE

Facial flaws both large and small can be repaired by make up. How to give the illusion of perfection to imperfect features is detailed in my leaflet, "Make-Up Make Believe." To obtain a copy, write to me in care of this newspaper, enclosing a postage stamp addressed, stamped envelope and five cents postage.

Sandwiches Basic Fare For Busy Picnic Meals

This popular habit of outdoor eating is a kind of meal for the there was tea. But not tea water which was poured over the other ingredients. This is the best way to keep bread from getting soggy. The best water bottle on the best. Rye bread is good with peanut butter.

I like to eat sandwiches with each end in waxed paper. I find for that reason that I'm more satisfied with my sandwich because it's one big sandwich, the only one who receives. And at the possible risk of being too seriously warning you, don't take chances regarding soaring temperatures, eat a sandwich after a swim, or an picnic.

Anyway, no time should be when you get time. Eat for the busy regardless which has been exposed to the sun. When you're still, and fresh out quickly. A sandwich is a good idea for a quick meal.

Once you've decided on a particular sandwich, planning for the meal starts.

The other day while sitting on the beach, several of us decided to put our sandwiches in paper bags. This is a good idea because it can be so easy to get a sandwich out of a paper bag. But if you do this, you'll have to wash the paper bag.

BESSIE'S Grandmother Wins $3,000 In Car Race

SYDNEY, Australia—Mrs. Bessie Martin, 73, grandmother of 12, has won the $3,000 race for the second year running. Last year, Mrs. Martin, 72, won the first race without buying a ticket and this year she did the same.

She beat the field of 100 drivers through the toughest weather in Australia. Last year, she overcame a 100-to-1 odds. This year, she faced a 100-to-1 chance. The race was held in the rain and mud, and the mother-daughter set heavily watered a 100-year-old country road.

She said the idea originated with her son, and he suggested it would be a good idea for a woman to win a car race.

She has 20,000 miles on her car, and she has won the race for the past two years.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

This is a very simple recipe for chocolate syrup. You will need 1 cup of sugar, 1/2 cup of water, 1/2 cup of chocolate, 1/2 cup of cream, and 1/2 cup of milk.

Boil the sugar and water which was previously prepared. Add 1/2 cup of cream, and 1/2 cup of milk.

When the sugar has dissolved, add the chocolate and boil for another 5 minutes.

Strain the syrup and let it cool.

It is now ready to use.

HIGH SEAS

Dr. Ferris Neave of the Pacific Biological Station at Departure Bay, told Rotary Club Friday that eventually salmon boats would venture on to the high seas to make their catches. Fisheries research board is making some of its observations at least 1,000 miles from the B.C. coast. Japan is doing likewise in the western reaches of the North Pacific, and the U.S. is conducting its investigations in the centre. All explorations by the three countries are closely allied and notes are compared by the scientists.

Investigating parties have been going out from the Departure Bay station here for the past two years.

Fair Plea

Pearkes Asked To Help

NORTH COWICHAN — Defence Minister G. R. Pearkes has been asked to intercede with the army to allow the old agricultural hall here, now part of the Duncan Armory, to be used for the Cowichan Exhibition.

Exhibition president Archie Stevenson sent a wire to Mr. Pearkes. He said the hall had been part of the fall fair since 1927 and it would be almost impossible to stage the fair without it.

The exhibition will be held Sept. 5, 6 and 7. Part of it this year will be the 13th annual Vancouver Island Red and White cattle show.

The fair was first held in 1866 under a tree near St. Peter's Church, Qualicum. It was later held at Maple Bay and has been in its present location since 1912. It has vacated the premises at the end of the year to allow the Indians re-possession of the grounds, through a technical flaw in the old lease.
